ABSTRACT

[0077] Presented herein are systems and methods for integrating credit cards into mobile terminals. A mobile terminal comprises a secured non-volatile memory, a keypad, and an output. The non-volatile memory stores credit card account information. The keypad provides inputs. The output provides the credit card account information after the keypad provides a certain input.